

The Wheat Quality Council will sponsor a Hard Winter Wheat Tour again this May. We will follow our traditional routes and make field stops every 10-15 miles along the way. We will provide expertise in each car to train with throughout the day. These tours are a great way to both see this year's crop firsthand and get training in the fields to learn about yield, insects and disease problems that may affect the crop. We have dinner together each night and hear reports from each car. We will also get reports from Nebraska, Colorado and Oklahoma from crop scouts traveling through those states on the same days. We shuffle car assignments each day. It's a great way to meet others in the industry. Attached are the routes we will follow and the registration/agenda pages. Let me know if you can drive. Hope you can join us this year and please forward to others that you think might benefit. Keep me informed of your travel needs and plans. As usual, I am available for questions.
